IS INDICTMENT OF OPERATORS

Washington, March 12—A story of abject poverty and suffering among the thousands of victims of the soft coal strike was spread on the records of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today in a report submitted by the

ACIDITY CAUSES 90% DIGESTION TROUBLE

Avoid Fancy Treatments and Remove this Cause

While many things, directly or indirectly, may cause stomach trouble, any medical man will tell you that over nine-tenths of all cases of indigestion are due to or accompanied by acidity and food fermentation. Excess acid accumulates in the stomach and turns the food into a souring, fermenting mass which produces painful gases and still more acid and is usually directly responsible for indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, acidity, flatulence, and gastritis.

Obviously you can not remedy these disorders by improving your blood or nerves, nor by clearing your system of impurities. Excellent as these processes may be as conducive to good health, that will not rid you of that harmful stomach acid. To do this quickly, safely and surely, you should take a little "Pape's Diapiesin" after eating or when pain is felt. This not only gives quick relief by instantly neutralizing stomach acid, but soothes and heals your acid-inflamed stomach lining.

"Pape's Diapiesin" is sold by all druggists at 50 cents a package, and is used by millions because it is not a "fever-all medicine" which pretends to remedy a hundred and one ills—"Pape's Diapiesin" stops indigestion instantly because it removes the cause.—Adv.

DIPHTHERIA TOLL IN COUNTY AT MINIMUM

State Health Department Credits Situation to Immunization Work

Marion County is one of the banner counties of the state in the successful fight being waged by health authorities against diphtheria, according to a statement made here today by Dr. F. Van Orsdall, representative of the State Health Department.

This county, Dr. Van Orsdall says, was one of the first to take up active testing and immunization work and as a result has reduced its diphtheria toll to one of the lowest in the state.

The immunization campaign started here in 1922 and has included all schools of the county.

Dr. Van Orsdall and Dr. N. Sifert, county health commissioner, were at Lafayette today to administer Schick testing to pupils in the grade schools there. The tests were made in response to a request coming from school officials of the Lafayette district, the purpose being to make sure that all of the children are protected with effective immunization. Although figures showing definite reduction in Schick testing were not available in Marion County at this time, Dr. Van Orsdall cited statistics from the city of Youngstown as an example of what has been accomplished generally.

In 1922, before the immunization campaign started, there were 905 cases of diphtheria in Youngstown and 53 of the patients died. These figures have been reduced annually until in 1926 the totals for Youngstown were 38 cases and only one death.

Wouldn't it be awful should the G. O. P. go and nominate a candidate never approached by Senator Borah with his questionnaire, which now seems more than half probable?

Upon the occasion of the first presentation in twenty years of a Strauss opera in La Scala, the great opera-house of Milan, the audience arose and gave Richard Strauss a great ovation. The Italians and the Austrians have their differences, but they do not so sufficiently far to close the Italian ear to art in melody.

The Atlantic City chamber of commerce announces that there will be no more "bathing beauty" contests in that city. Atlantic City has learned that advertising fakes such as have been worked off on the public over there have a cheapening effect, as manifested by the class of patronage the city has experienced since the "bathing suit" parades were introduced.

The mayor of Boston says street car patrons should pay for the service they enjoy. Were payment predicated on the enjoyment of patrons, there wouldn't be a street car company in the country outside a receivership within six months.

American holders of pre-war German marks have organized to appeal to the League of Nations to get payment for their holdings. They bought marks when they could be had for a song, hoping to profit splendidly when the war was over. The bottom fell out and now they want their losses made good. They are not even remote approaches to good sports.

A young man claiming to be a German baron has brought suit against a Chicago broker and the latter's wife for $100,000 damages for the alienation of the affections of their daughter to whom he asserts he became engaged while she was touring Europe with her parents. If this claim holds, it's going to make touring Europe by people with daughters of marriageable age extra hazardous.

The commander of the French Mediterranean fleet says the seas belong to nobody. That's what the pacifists, the internationalists and other foes of our government have made a lot of the members of the lower-house of congress believe, but it will be hard to convince John Bull that there's anything in that view.

Before taking action looking to the barring of the exporting of arms or military supplies—a splendid proposal from a pacifist viewpoint—it may be well for congress to consider where we would secure arms for our own use, should the occasion arise, having driven all private manufacturers out of business.

Off the Beaten Paths.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson, the parents of both of whom are wealthy, have received quite a lot of newspaper publicity as a result of the fact that they spent the first two weeks of their honeymoon in a two-room cabin on the plantation of a friend in Virginia. Happily for them, no one save the owner of the plantation and his servants knew the whereabouts of the young couple, and the servants didn't know who they were until the day before they were ready to leave the cabin to start out on a hike around the world.

Many will be inclined to look upon a hike around the world as a rather bizarre proceeding for a young married couple with ample means to enjoy every luxury travel affords, and it is more than probable that those not financially able to travel do luxe will be more inclined to take this view than those who are.

The answer is that this particular bride and groom have traveled do luxe. They are accustomed to the biggest and fastest liners, to do luxe trains and hotels and up-to-date cars. They probably know travel as the socially elect, or those who call themselves the socially elect, are accustomed to travel. They probably know what it means to hit only the biggest cities and seaside resorts. They know, too, in all probability, what it means to travel and meet only the people of their own circle, their own class, and spend the most of their time in hotels, restaurants and casinos, eating and drinking, and dancing, and gambling. And they probably are sick and tired of it and want to get away from it. They want to see the world and its people as they never have seen it; to stand upon their own feet. And more than that, they do not want to be pestered and bored by those who are ever found hanging about the borders of those circles they look upon as "swank."

If such is the motive of young Mr. and Mrs. Johnson in getting away from the beaten paths, who can say it is not a wise one? And who will say that the two young hikers will not know far more of the world, when their tour is over, than they would have gleaned had they made their world tour in any other way?

Development of Patagonia.

Many changes a few decades will work, especially when changes are so much more numerous and so much more pronounced than they were before.

We distinctly recall that back in the time we studied geography, Patagonia was largely wild and its people largely savage. By far the greater part of it was without cities and towns. Harbors were the rare exception, and the most of them were little more than points of call where ships started one way or another around the Horn sought fresh water.

Patagonia at that time was largely desert, abandoned to wild birds and small wild animals and wild men capable of existing in such a land. How these conditions have been changed was told a few days ago to a number of New York newspaper men by W. W. Rorer, of the Pan-American union, who, in part, thus explained the metamorphosis of former waste to plenty.

"A group of enterprising English islanders pooled their ideas and energy, sailed for Argentina, began buying up sheep in the Central Pampa, already a developed sheep-farming region, and having acquired as many of the hardest animals as they could handle, began to drive the flocks southward. Shelter and food of a simple kind were taken for the men, the flocks picked up a living as they went along. The journey was a slow one, and twice the shepherds were obliged to stop and camp while shearing was performed; the animals could not travel without relief from their heavy coats, but, since there was neither market nor means of transport for the wool, it was left upon the ground where it fell.

"Twice, also, they camped for the lambing season, taking up the march again when the young things were strong enough for what became an increasingly trying pilgrimage, with the sweet and succulent grass of the northerly pampas succeeded by wiry pastures and later by scrub. This scrub, however, is edible, and the hardy descendants of the original Romney March breed thrive upon it. The farmers prospered also. They broke ground where, so far as history tells us, none but a few Indians had ever tried to live before, they raised homes in the wilderness; there were no noxious animals with which to fight, but they fought loneliness, the lack of all things which civilized communities have become accustomed—including good water and means of communication.

"Today Patagonia is transformed. Farm is linked with farm by telephone and telegraph; upon long level roads the automobile may travel from Bahia Blanca to Punta Arenas. The small ports have taken on unwonted activity, for through their gates are exported huge quantities of wool, meats and furs. The Patagonian sheep farmer is rich. His one-room hut has given way to a spacious well-furnished mansion. He keeps fine cattle and horses, while on his table, once containing little but mutton, appear fruits and vegetables of his own cultivation. He buys diamonds for his wife and daughters. He has earned his golden harvest."

Lack of water was long the serious problem of the colonists, Mr. Rorer explained, but when it was found that fine grapes as well as many varieties of berries could be grown successfully, there was resort to wine as a beverage, the colonists finding that the fruit of their vineyards produced a wonderfully fine wine, and this helped out until artesian wells could be developed to give an ample supply of fine water.

The last estimate attainable places the number of sheep in Patagonia at 16,000,000, annually yielding about 100,000,000 pounds of wool. The value of the estates with stock is put at over $50,000,000. The mutton-canning and freezing industries are comparatively new, but all down the coast, particularly at Puerto Madryn and San Julian, the next few years promise big developments in the meat preserving and allied industries; Santa Cruz, Comodoro, Desado, Comodoro Rivadavia, Rio Gallegos, and, although outside the Argentine boundaries an economic ally of Eastern Patagonia, that southerly city, Punta Arenas, are all points brought into active being by the sheep farmer.

At this time when the people of the United States are being asked to give up scores upon scores of millions for reclamation purposes, it is decidedly interesting to learn how these hardy colonists, relying solely upon themselves and their own efforts, went ahead and reclaimed the desert wastes of Patagonia and made it a land of plenty.

At times one is bound to wonder if it is not possible that we of the United States are not inclined to depend too much on the government and the aid it may render us in our enterprises, assuming that, "since the government stands the cost," if no part of it falls upon us, whereas the truth is that there is no aid so costly as government aid. The generation in which it is rendered may not consider it, but the probabilities are that ensuing generations will.

Vagrant Verse.

VESPER MUSIC FOR WINTER.

Scherzo.

On what day of desolate cold,
When the long branches whine as they sway,
On what day of sleet brief and gray,
Moon thrilled, brittle-bright,
Does the Thanton of Spring
Touch the lute's inner, green,
Lustrous, delicate sheen?
So if I pick them and bring
Sheaves of them in they will wake
Scatter their daisies and break
Out into leaflets of gold!

Andante.

Oh, on what year of my years
Now they are shivering and cold
Black and frozen and vain—
Will this that I told
Close in the ear of my heart
Down deep at the well of my soul
Be touched by the Angel? Like spurs
Of ecstasy? How shall I know?
What shall I take for a sign?
When I am safe, Lord, to go,
Gathered away to the tomb?
Know that this dark bud of mine
Will scatter its embers and shine,
Rustle to an Angel of Dawn.
Before Thee, O Lord, in Thy power?
—Maude Caldwell Perry.

WHY ARE PUDDLES ALWAYS SO TEMPTING?

"Prevention Firs."

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Erasmus used to teach that prevention is better than cure. There is no doubt about this. Everybody knows it is easier to keep well than it is to get well. It is easier to keep than it is to get. It is easier to stay good than it is to reform. Certainly prevention is better and easier than cure.

For many years I spent my life "curing" people. One by one these sick people who came under my care had to be dealt with as individuals. I can think of a few callings in life more satisfactory than the privilege of restoring a blind man to sight is equal almost to the joy of the person restored. You can understand that this is no mean privilege. But I have come to believe there is a higher privilege, and that is teaching people how to avoid disease.

When we discover the cause of extraneous and can teach the public how to live so that nobody will ever have cancer, that is a higher privilege than operating upon the patient and giving back the lost vision.

Nobody can question that to bring up a child from his birth in such a manner as to guard against infection and disease is a great accomplishment. To teach a manner of living that will guarantee health all through a long life, means that we have added materially to the economic wealth of the world.

It is amazing how many days are lost on the average out of every year of the life of an individual. If we could teach the rules of personal hygiene, and have them conscientiously followed, it would be true of every individual, not only that he would live longer, but that he would be much more useful to society and much happier than he would otherwise be.

This is a roundabout way of saying what Erasmus stated. Nobody can doubt that prevention is better than cure.

Almost every disease a man has, almost every pain a woman suffers, almost every ailment that comes to plague the child, almost every one of these things is something that could be prevented.

When we come to accept this fact and to realize its significance, we will be ashamed to admit that we do not feel well. Sickness will be regarded as a reproach.

I hasten to say that we have not reached that point as yet. It would be cruel indeed to frown upon those who suffer, and to find fault with those who are really sick. But as the world progresses, I am confident we will reach a time when the importance of preventing disease will be even more highly regarded than it is at present.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

R. C. S. Q.—What will cure nasal catarrh?
A.—Nasal catarrh requires special treatment. A good nose and throat spray is often beneficial. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

M. J. P.—What is the cause of shingles?
A.—Some kind of body poison is responsible for the trouble as a rule, but the exact cause is uncertain. You should have a thorough examination and follow your doctor's advice as to treatment.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Comment.

WAR-BREEDING PACIFISTS.

Representative McClintock says that "the pacifist is a less dangerous citizen than the radical militarist." Assuming that the latter type of person really exists in this country, and that consequently the congressman's comparison has pertinence, we wish to say that we thoroughly disagree with him.

Neither a pacifist nor a radical militarist, so called, is a desirable type of citizen. But at the worst, the latter can do no more than make the United States spend more money for national defense than it is necessary to spend.

[The idea that preparedness in America would promote an evil spirit of belligerence and international uprightness is an insulting doctrine, advanced principally by designing communists and by the type of religiousist who always expects his fellow men to exhibit the lowest and meanest possible form of reaction to any opportunity which occasions or conditions afford.]

On the other hand, the program of the pacifists if they are able to put it over—and they are meeting with considerable success just now—will make this country defenseless in a decidedly unsettled world, and will lay it open to insult, imposition and predatory attack, and sooner or later will inevitably force it to fight at a disadvantage, and involve it in serious and unnecessary loss.

The United States never has gone to war because it has been over-prepared for war. But it has plunged into at least two serious foreign conflicts because it has been obviously, almost ostentatiously, unready to protect itself in any decisive, effective way, and it has been saved from permanent disaster only because it was lucky.

Whereas proper defense preparations would have cost the United States millions of dollars, since the opening of the century, unpreparedness born of pacifism, has cost it billions. And the same comparison stands true with respect to human casualties.

We know that today the pacifists are asking with sneers—"Who is it the United States is going to fight?" The predecessors of these people asked the same question just before the World War when they, too, were trying to scuttle the navy and destroy the army. The country found out the answer to their query—to its cost. And those who today are working to prevent America from being reasonably and sensibly prepared against trouble are taking a fearful responsibility upon themselves. If they succeed in their program, sooner or later the blood of the innocents will be on their heads. —Detroit Free Press.

WILLIAM H. CRANE.

Twelve years ago a veteran actor retired from the American stage with the plaudits and praise of his fellow Theatians and the affectionate regard of a great public after more than half a century of continuous performance before the footlights. William H. Crane had become a veritable institution in this country as a public entertainer. He had played in many roles, always as a comedian, never aspiring to the higher reaches of dramatic art, content to provide amusement through legitimate methods. His plays were not, save in one or two instances, of notable quality. None has survived the period of immediate popularity, due to his own presence on the stage. But in the course of that long time, Crane gave great enjoyment to countless thousands of people. Perhaps he owed something of his popularity to his association with Stuart Robson, with whom he acted for twelve years, their greatest success being in "The Comedy of Errors," as the two Dromios, and in "The Hottentot," a farce of exceptional quality, which ran for a number of seasons. They were an intimate pair, working together with remarkable effectiveness.

When 1916 Mr. Crane retired from the legitimate stage, he thought to bid farewell forever to the dramatic life, but after a period of quiet retirement in the East he moved to Hollywood, California, and there, from time to time, he yielded to the lure of the silent drama and made appearances on the screen. Always thrifty, he had by the time of his retirement amassed a considerable fortune, and was in far more comfortable circumstances than is usually the lot of the veteran actor. And he was in another respect different from many of his fellows of the stage: His married life was ideal. He was in every respect a credit to his profession, as he had been a large contributor to the pleasure of the American people. So long has it been since he appeared in public that most of his admirers of earlier days thought that he had already taken his final "curtain," and it was a matter of surprise to them that he was still in the land of the living when a few days ago word came that he was dying.

The stage owes much to him. His work was clean and wholesome. His plays were refreshing. There was never in any of them, or in his renditions of characters, the least suggestion of the morbid or the salacious. The dramatic currents have flowed on since his period of activity to bring before the public much that is debasing, and it is well to remember the days of Crane as a time of good health in American theatricals, in the hope that the tide may change and restore the stage to its higher standards of earlier times.—Washington Star.

Magic Underfoot.

BY GARRETT P. SERVICE.

"A says if a body's a whiffling beneath the surface of the earth, he's 3,000 miles below considerable percentage of its weight. He says content that Newton's law of weight varies inversely with square of distance does not hold beneath the earth's surface. B contends that a body will gain weight as it approaches the center of the earth in accordance with Newton's law. Who's is right?—I. C. H., New York.

B forgets that Newton himself proved that inside a spherical shell of uniform density and thickness a particle has no weight, i. e., is not drawn in any direction for the attraction of the shell upon it is balanced on all sides. Therefore if the earth consisted of a hollow shell of that kind a body or particle placed inside would have no tendency to fall in any direction. It would not need to be at the center of the hollow globe, because as Newton showed mathematically, no matter where it was in the interior space the balance of attraction would be maintained.

Now, a solid sphere of uniform density may be regarded as made up of a continuous series of superposed shells. Supposing the earth to be such a sphere, then a particle situated at any depth within it will experience no effect of attraction from any part of the earth's mass that is situated at a greater distance from the center than the particle, i. e., above the level of the particle. It will be drawn toward the center only by so much of the earth's mass as lies below its level.

From this it follows that the nearer to the center the particle is placed the less will be the attraction upon it, or the less its weight, and when it is exactly at the center it will not be attracted in any direction, or will have no weight.

But the earth is not exactly a sphere and it is not of uniform density, so that in applying the principle of Newton above explained some modification of the results is to be expected. Because our knowledge of the interior state of the earth is mostly inferential it is not easy to invent a formula that will truly represent the facts. The great French mathematician, Laplace, however, made a formula that has been used in hypothetical calculations of this kind which probably show approximately the real operation of gravity inside the earth.

As applied by Professor R. S. Woodworth, Laplace's formula indicates that the force of gravity increases slightly down to a depth of about 610 miles where it becomes a maximum at the value of nearly 1.04. This means that a body weighing 100 pounds on the surface would weigh 104 pounds at a depth of about 600 miles. Below that depth the calculation shows that the force of gravity diminishes at an increasing rate, becoming only 0.4567 at the depth of 3,000 miles, and vanishing at the center.

But, while the body would possess no weight, i. e., no tendency to move toward the center when it was at the center itself, yet it would be subjected there to an enormous pressure on all sides from the superincumbent mass of the globe. Calculation shows that this pressure would amount to about 25,000 tons per square inch. The pressure increases uninterruptedly from surface to center. If it troubles you to understand how the pressure can become a maximum where the weight becomes zero, you have only to reflect that the pressure represents the weight of a continuous column of matter nearly 4,000 miles in height, while the weight of the particle represents merely the force of gravity upon that particle when it is at certain distances from the center, and since gravity becomes zero at the center the weight of the particle must there become zero likewise.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

Paris Latin Quarter.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.

Paris, March 12.—The Latin Quarter is a place to provoke smiles in the same fashion as Greenwich Village. It displays its native sons and the real cultural ferment stirring in the brain of a rarely seen. Only common people and the still-born "arty" what-nots are excluded.

The Cafe du Dome remains the Montparnasse Mecca with the Hotonde across the street and the Seler down the block catching the eye of the passers-by. Here the boys and girls referred to as "studying art abroad" wear beret hats and smoke and put up the saucers.

Every freak item of art finds immediate following. The young man with lathered beard and velvet hat slipping his period is a particular magnet. This school will just "hang out" for years before doing anything in the way of actual physical effort. Sometimes they never get around to it.

The young girl with the Dutch bob and wears a crown and sandals and puffs a fat cigar is identified with the neo-something or other. She makes her way through the throng of the Dome like a line-plugging fullback, showing off, you understand, just things that great big thoughts. And always Kiki Dome heyden.

Two girls in mannish attire with swastika sticks and monocles debouch from the Mecca. They stop as inconspicuously as matinee idols on the curb and discuss something that amuses them tremendously. They slap each other on the back man-fashion, light cigarettes and move away.

Then there are those youths with fuzzy hair, their jaws trimmed pointedly who wear wide black hats of Boulevard St. Michel. They call each other Rene, Pierre and Andre, and pat their talk with frequent "Violas" or "Alors" and eagerly await the monthly check from self-sacrificing parents in Twain, Nebraska.

It is but fair to say all this is the "show." Hundreds of young men and women are studying earnestly in the attics and schools to furnish the world with great artistic beauty. But they are rarely seen around the Dome.

The King and Queen of Afghanistan were Paris and native flags of their country from every building. Nothing so thrills Paris as a touch of royalty. Aside from reviving fluttering monarchic hopes, it gives the to another excuse for a holiday. I have been here ten days and there have been four or five with all stores and public buildings closed. Paris reporter invited me to one of the public receptions but I don't speak Afghan well.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

A growing number of business men in country have been wisely expanding plants and stores. They have raised wages and some have put in profit-sharing system that their employees might do better. Shows vision and such men deserve credit. These practices do not insure a man against the duty of giving away a part of his income.

Some men excuse their small gifts to community chest or to this or that cause on the ground that they employ many men and pay good wages. The fact is employ many men in the hope of more production and profit. And it is merely business sense to pay decent wages. A civilized and thoughtful human being will aside money which he does not actually and will use it in ways that will improve condition of the greater number.

Years ago the elder Rockefeller, ahead of time in many ways, saw the advantage of bination and giant corporate interests went through a period of prosecution and accusation and became pretty thoroughly I Now we have learned that large corporations and great combinations of business make prices, more productivity and a more widely distributed prosperity. John D. Rockefeller has become popular and is looked up to wise man.

Unfortunately for this country there are a few men who, like Rockefeller, have turned their immense gains into funds for the mon good.

In his business-building and his Rockefeller presents one of the world's most examples of a man with imaginative brains that function.

Here's a bit of good news. Swift, & Company, Chicago meat packers that prices which farmers get for farm produce a more reasonable relation to the farmers have to pay for their supplies at any time since 1920. Let's hope this trend continues. Not only will the farmer be happier. We will all be happier. Farmer doesn't do well we can be sure the rest of us will feel it soon.

Now we're starting something that something. The New York Legislature grant a charter to a "Religious Education Foundation." Men worth millions are to contribute to such a fund if it is administered. The money will be organized young people's activities in moral and civic training, the training of teachers for church schools and for activities for youth in colleges. This is in the right place to make a better

Three billion of dollars have already paid into funds of "foundations" by Rockefeller foundation. It is entirely the Religious Education foundation will the most important of all.

1,000 PARTICIPATE IN VESPER SERVICES

Sunday Afternoon Programs at First Presbyterian Church Growing in Interest

Vesper services at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon as the second of a series of special programs planned for February, March and April were enjoyed by a congregation numbering approximately 1,000, an increase of several hundred over the attendance at the first service, held last month.

This attendance record is regarded as a certain indication that the monthly musical programs have met with general favor among local churchgoers and that the vespers may be made a permanent feature of worship at the First Presbyterian Church.

Yesterday's program, which began at 4:15 o'clock and continued until 5:30, included numbers by the choir, quartet and soloists, as well as several instrumental selections. Several numbers suggestive of the coming Easter season were special features.

The program was as follows: Organ prelude, "Evening Thought," Mrs. H. T. Williams, church organist; evening prayer and response, Rev. H. L. Olesander and choir; hymn and scripture reading by congregation; organ, "Alpine Reverie," Mrs. Williams; vocal solo, "The Everlasting Hills," Miss Margaret Brickman; quartet, "Jesus Only," Miss Brickman, Miss Ruth Henderson, V. C. Smith and Harwood Taylor; vocal solo, "Gethsemane," Miss Henderson; "Holy, Holy," choir selection with tenor solo by Mr. Smith; instrumental duo, "Grand Aria," Mrs. J. C. Woods, pianist and Mrs. Williams, organist; vocal solo, "A New Heaven and a New Earth," Mr. Taylor.

The program was arranged and given under the direction of Charles Collier, church musical director.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN HAS CLASS WITH 104

New High Record for Attendance Reached by Men's Group

A new high record for attendance was made by the Men's Bible Class of the First Presbyterian Sunday School, yesterday, when the enrollment reached 104. The highest mark up to that time was reached the preceding Sunday, when the attendance was 102. Enrollment of the class has been more than doubled during the progress of a membership campaign which started Jan. 1. The campaign is being conducted by 10 teams entered in a contest planned to represent an automobile race. The team captained by R. G. Williamson, which has been in the lead for several weeks, made a substantial gain in yesterday's count. The contest will close Easter Sunday.

Next Sunday the class will observe "Martin Luther Day" in honor of Mr. Verburg, who has taught the class

State Legion Commander Charges Mismanagement; Former Marion Man Head

Probability that affairs at the Ohio Soldiers' & Sailors' Orphans Home at Xenia, which is under the management of T. E. Andrews, former mayor of Marion, will be the subject of an official investigation in the near future was indicated in a report published in a Cleveland newspaper, yesterday.

The report on local conditions was made in Cleveland by George Bremer of Middletown, state commander of the American Legion, who said that he discussed the management of the home in conference with Governor Denney last week and that the investigation is being for an airing.

Denney, the report published yesterday states, charges Andrews with mismanagement.

The American Legion commander

does not place all of the blame for alleged objectionable conditions on Superintendent Andrews. He says that the trustees are equally at fault. Denney says that the children are unable to use the swimming pool at the home because the greater part of the room is not plastered.

Denney also alleges that the children are not provided with adequate clothing during the winter months.

What Would You Do In The Gas Company's Place?

Suppose you had to wait three or four years to find out what your job would pay or what you would get for your goods. And suppose, all this time someone was proclaiming himself your opponent and doing all he could to mislead your customers or give you a "bad name" with your employer. Would you regard it as fair?

Suppose your expenses and all the other demands upon you were constantly increasing while your wages, salary, income or sales in business remained stationary or perhaps declined. Do you think you could make a permanent plan as to the future? Would you feel encouraged to go ahead?

Your Gas Company is patiently striving to carry on despite opposition inspired by personal ambition. The Gas Company has pursued this course in the belief that sooner or later the public would see the truth and take action to see that fairness is done.

There is nothing unreasonable in the Gas Company's rate request. It involves simply a charge of $1.00 for the first 500 cubic feet or any part thereof and 60c net per thousand cubic feet thereafter. Other cities are paying as much and more. The average rate for the United States is $1.22 per thousand cubic feet and this is for 560 heat unit gas compared with 1040 heat unit gas now supplied in Marion.

You cannot develop Marion without gas and there is no reason why it should not be supplied in reliable and efficient quantities assuring full use for all heat purposes. All the company asks is the same chance any individual or business concern must have to "make good."

This is a business matter and not a political game. You want to buy gas and the Gas Company wants to sell it. Should you go about this in a manner different from other buying and selling transactions?

Will you help bring this question to a prompt conclusion for the good of Marion and make way for progress?

Late Charley Ebbets Would Turn Over in Grave at State of Affairs Existing on His Old Baseball Aggregation; Have Kid Infield

Editor's Note—This is the sixth of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with developments in various major league training camps. Other articles of the series will follow.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
Clearwater, Fla., March 12.—The writer had the privilege today of going upon a $200,000 ball club. At least, the payroll said it was a $200,000 outfit, a fact that might be deemed sufficient to prompt the late Charley Ebbets to turn turtle in his tomb. For the Brooklyn Dodgers used to be Charley's ball club and this once was Charley's money.

Years ago, in a moment of eloquence, Charley delivered himself of the dictum that baseball still was in its infancy. What he probably meant was that it soon was to go into its second childhood. When a ball club holds the head of the second division as its abiding ambition, is willing to pay and does pay Arnold Statz a salary of $10,000 for the season, the faculty of reason fairly totters on its throne.

Mr. Wilbert Robinson, the owner, faced, Swiss movement president manager of the club, seems to be the sponsor for this policy of prodigality, although Charley himself was hardly the human stringency that popular fable would have him. However, it is to be doubted that he would have listened very attentively to Statz's $10,000 talk of a season's salary. Nor would he have paid Max Carey and Bill Doak anything more than polite attention; anyhow, not $10,000 each. It is an open question whether Jess Petty would have shaken him loose for $15,000. He probably would have granted Dazzy Vance his $20,000 but I fear that the capitulation would have been marked by that spontaneous enthusiasm so noticeable in a man conceding a five foot putt.

JACK AT THRESHOLD OF TUNNEY BATTLE

Sharkey Must Defeat Risko in Early Rounds of Affair Tonight

New York, March 12.—Jack Sharkey, of Boston, is standing at the threshold of a million-dollar battle with Gene Tunney.

Last summer it was Jack Tunney who barred the way, this time it is Sharkey, unless Johnnie Risko, the favorite of the Y. M. C. A., today, led the fight.

Temporarily may play the role of a strong contender, who will start at 1 o'clock and last Saturday night in the Star Auditorium.

Against Tom Henney, another contender, Sharkey was never animated by the spark of aggressiveness that he had shown in his first fight.

Risko is another "groove" fighter. He can be depended on to land his own pace for 15 rounds unless badly punished by body blows.

That was how Henney defeated him in Boston, tapping, holding or scuffling will not discourage him.

The Cleveland boxer boy knows only one style. He comes in flourishing his left foot for looks to the head or body. A clever boxer can "limp up" at close quarters but he always returns to the charge.

It is a question whether Sharkey can beat Risko by wearing his gloves as Johnnie comes in to him. A few rounds of that might turn it into a purely defensive fight for Sharkey.

He may try coming down the home stretch. His best chance to win decisively is to exert all his skill and strength in a scathing attack early in the fight.

Sharkey is the faster man and by far the better boxer. He can punch effectively with both hands and should be able to break up Risko's boxing attacks by simply stepping inside on those long leads.

If endurance is to be the deciding factor Risko has a great chance. He is young and a score of grueling battles have apparently not sapped his vitality.

He will further notice, Carey, no longer a hitter will be in right, with Harry Hendricks, always a hitter but as an outfielder and first baseman, Statz, one of the finest defensive men the game affords, will roam center field.

Overton Trepner, former University of Pennsylvania man, has a chance to stay if he hits.

The old line of catchers, Frank DeBerry, Butch Henline and Charley Graves, again is around and about, which probably means that Hugh Wes, Purdue University won't be for long.

TWO NEGROES HELD IN MARION STORE THEFT

Girl Clerk Seizes Man in Dash from Store; Captured by Herman Irey

Courage displayed by Miss Jane J. Mahery, clerk at the Metropolitan Store, Main and Church-sts. in seizing a negro who had stolen a quantity of ladies silk underwear, early Saturday night, led to the capture of two negroes, who, it is charged by police, stole goods valued at $15 from the store in the afternoon.

Herman Irey, who figured in the spectacular capture of two automobiles, three on W. Center-st. near the Hardings Hotel several months ago, also played a part in the capture of the negro who had taken the garments.

Shortly after 7 o'clock, Saturday night, Miss Mahery was standing behind the counter near the counter, suddenly seized several silk garments and crowded them under his coat started for the door. He had reached the opening when the counter was called by the manager, G. C. Schasberger.

Taken To Heels. Jerking away from the girl, the negro ran out of the store with the manager in pursuit. Just outside the door the manager seized the negro who, in his efforts to get away, dragged his cap and coat south on Main-st. to the telephone building where Irey seized the negro. The man turned on his heel and with his fists and the battle ended when an apparent delivery by Irey knocked out the colored man.

Police appeared at this time and the negro was taken to headquarters where he gave his name as Wilson McClinton, a negro 27, and his home as Springfield. A short time later a second negro, who it is said by the police had been with McClinton in the afternoon robbery and the appearance of $15 worth of silk underwear following their departure, led to the belief that the garments were stolen by the trio. He was unable to state definitely that the negroes who were arrested were the same two who visited the store in the afternoon however.

Mr. Schasberger said today that two negroes with a white man visited the store in the afternoon and the disappearance of $15 worth of silk underwear following their departure, led to the belief that the garments were stolen by the trio. He was unable to state definitely that the negroes who were arrested were the same two who visited the store in the afternoon however.
